HEY THERE!

My name is Maisy and I am the person behind Jupiter Moon, and who you'll be meeting at your session really soon!

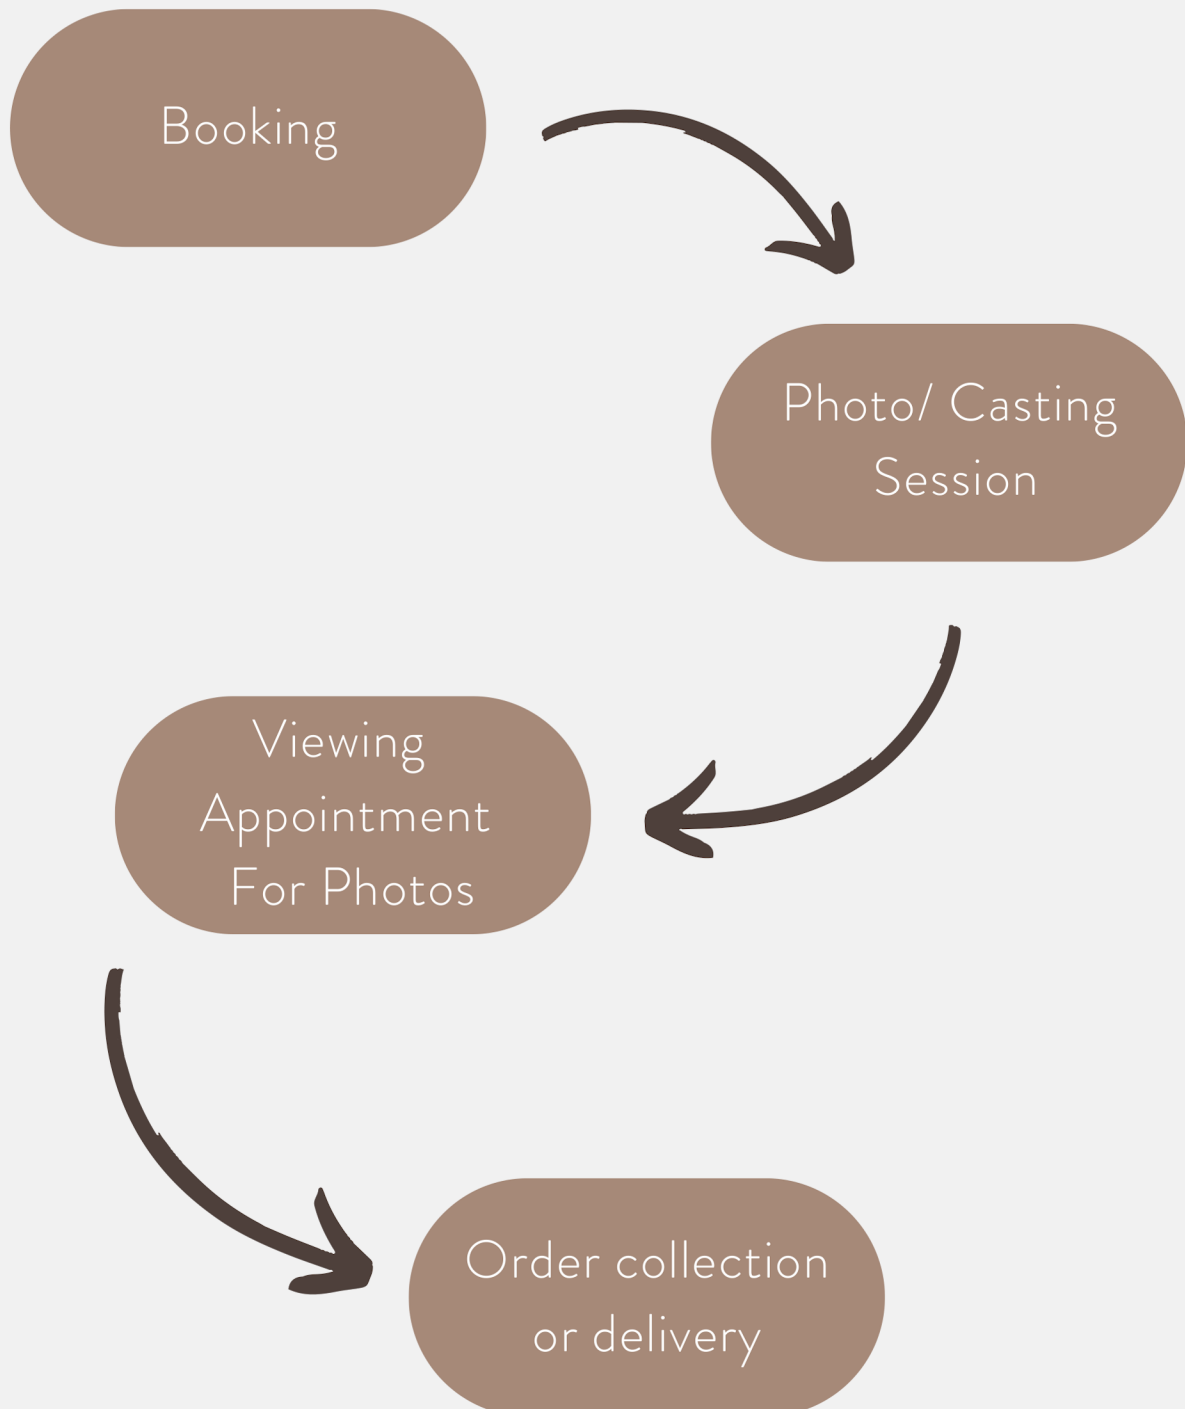

Capturing memories for growing families is what makes my heart sing and I am so excited you've hired me to help.

I've put together this preparation guide to help you feel more at ease before our session and to make sure you have everything in place to enjoy this time to the fullest.

With love, Maisy

WHAT TO EXPECT

The process

What to expect

Whether you booked your session to celebrate a big milestone or a new member of your family, I want you to walk away having the absolute best experience.

Before your session, I will have a read through your booking form, and I'll give you a quick call if there's any information missing that's important.

Every bit of information helps me design a session you will absolutely love, with results you will cherish for a lifetime. At my studio you will be able to view all of my frame samples and paint finishes for your casts, so these will be chosen on the day.

Your session will take no longer than an hour, so if you're bringing a newborn, please feed your baby before your travel, and they can be topped up during the session if needed. It can also be a good way to soothe baby while casts are being made.

Frequently asked Questions

What if it doesn't work?

While I aim to make successful casts on the day, and try and check while you're with me, there may be the occasional time when a cast just hasn't worked. I will offer you another session to re-cast totally free until we make the magic happen!

What if my child won't stay still?

A successful, detailed cast really does rely on your baby or children being fairly still. A little wiggle is ok, but it is important for children to remain calm. If this isn't possible, then your casts will look a little lumpy and lack detail. Newborns are best when they are sleeping or feeding, and I will try my hardest to work with your older children to get them to stay still. This bit can last around 2 minutes in total so it's not a long time.

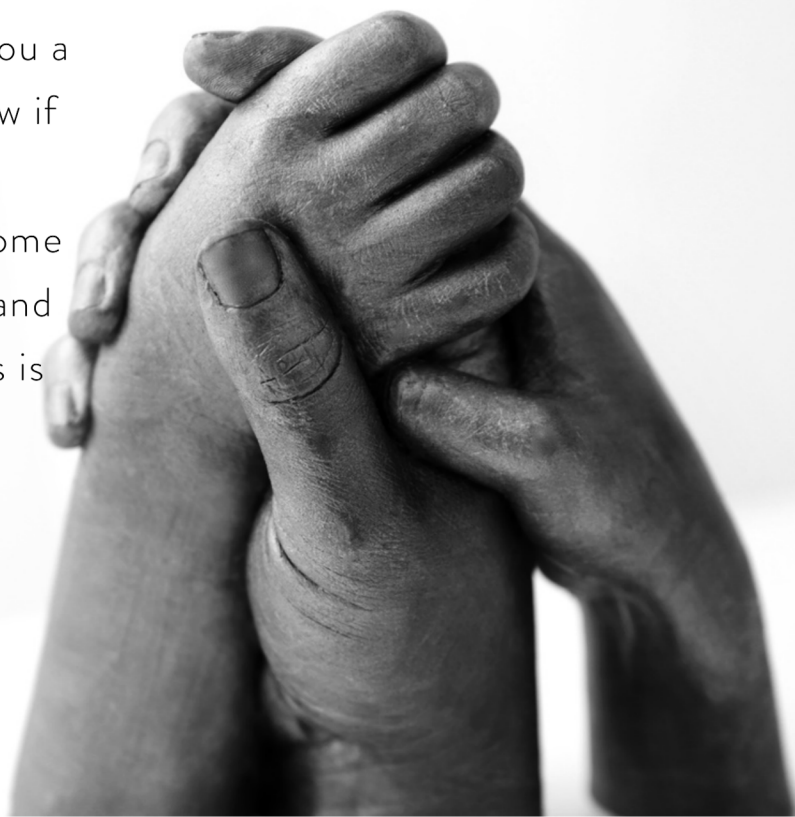

What should we wear for casting?

Short sleeves are the way to go. I will provide you with a waterproof cover, to keep your clothes as clean as possible. If you are holding a baby, I recommend bringing an old t-shirt just in case they need a quick cuddle or breastfeed. This way I can still have access to their hands and feet while they are being snuggled.

How long do I need to wait before the images are ready for the viewing?

Usually, the same day I take your casts, I will drop you a message to let you know if they've been a success. If not, I will send you some times to come back in and redo your casts but this is extremely rare.

How do I view the photos after the session?

If you have book for me to take an image for your frame, after your session, you will be send a proof gallery link to choose the image you'd like included.

If you've added a casting session on to your newborn booking, you will come to the studio to view and select your photos, choosing the image for your frame at your appointment.

What time do the sessions take place?

My casting sessions usually take place between 10am and 3pm on a Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, with limited weekend slots available on request.
